Programme Overview

Brief outline of the programme

The programme can be studied Part Time (6063).

Studying Modern History and Politics at Southampton offers undergraduates the opportunity to learn in an engaging, supportive and highly successful research environment. Southampton's History department contains world experts in an enormous range of fields. From the Classical World to the present day, and from Britain and the rest of Europe to the Americas, Australasia, Asia and Africa, studying History at Southampton affords its undergraduates the chance to study topics about which they are already passionate, or to try something entirely new. Studying modules within Politics and International Relations will introduce you to a host of theoretical and empirical ways of looking at the modern world. From issues of democracy and governance to the impact of globalization, the department is fully engaged in dealing with some of the most pressing issues of the modern age. Whatever students choose, Modern History and Politics at Southampton will enable them to gain invaluable skills and study topics about which both they and staff are passionate.

Your contact hours will vary depending on your module/option choices. Full information about contact hours is provided in individual module profiles.

Learning and teaching

Students at Southampton learn in a variety of ways. Lectures introduce students to the outline of a topic and the debates within it. Small-group seminars offer students the chance to interact with academics and other students in collaborative discussions. Additional learning and teaching materials, including podcasts, blogs and quizzes, are provided through the VLE (Blackboard) site for each module that you choose. Seminar and tutorial discussions can help inform and shape the ways in which students then go about writing their essays. Feedback on performance is given through informal one-to-one discussions, such as those on offer during lecturers' advice and feedback hours, and through oral and written feedback after submission of a piece of work.

Assessment

Modern History and Politics uses a range of assessment methods to ensure that students are able to demonstrate they have achieved intended learning outcomes. The most common means of assessment is an essay. Essays offer students the opportunity to demonstrate their use of skills in research and analysis to make their own arguments. Longer pieces of writing, allowing for a greater development of argument, become more common as an undergraduate progresses through his or her studies, and these allow students to formulate their own lines of research enquiry to create significant contributions to our collective understanding of the world. Although they account for less than 50% of the overall degree mark, exams are also taken, in order to assess students' ability to formulate clear, focused and engaging pieces of writing in test conditions. Oral presentations feature in some modules.

Please note: As a research-led University, we undertake a continuous review of our programmes to ensure quality enhancement and to manage our resources. As a result, this programme may be revised during a student's period of registration; however, any revision will be balanced against the requirement that the student should receive the educational service expected. Please read our Disclaimer to see why, when and how changes may be made to a student's programme.

Programmes and major changes to programmes are approved through the University's programme validation process which is described in the University's Quality handbook.

Educational Aims of the Programme

The aims of the programme are to:

- provide you with an understanding of the central theoretical and methodological issues involved in the study of History and of Politics and International relations;
- develop your knowledge and understanding of selected periods of History, and of themes within these periods; and similarly of selected issues and events within political studies;
- enhance your ability to reflect on the nature of History: how it has developed over time, and its place in modern culture;
- in parallel develop your capacity for critical evaluation of theoretical perspectives and empirical evidence in the fields of Politics and International Relations, and for the application of such perspectives in your own work;
- develop your capacity to undertake independent research into aspects of History and of Politics and International relations, using appropriate sources and methodologies;
- enable you to develop your skills in written and oral communication, critical analysis of quantitative and qualitative primary evidence, problem-solving, teamwork, and the effective and efficient use of information technology.

Programme Learning Outcomes

Knowledge and Understanding

On successful completion of this programme you will have knowledge and understanding of:

- A1. the different ways in which the human past can be approached and constructed by historians, and in which the contemporary world can be examined and interpreted by social scientists, specifically within the complementary disciplines of Politics and International Relations;
- A2. the different ways in which images and interpretations of the human past are produced and consumed within our own and other societies, noting in particular the nature and significance of political activity, engagement, and phenomena;
- A3. the relationship between historical sources, evidence, argument and interpretation;
- A4. the application of political concepts, theories and methods;
- A5. patterns of diversity in selected areas of History;
- A6. a number of chronological periods and geographical areas of the past;
- A7. different interpretations of political issues and events;
- A8. research design, evaluation and application.

Teaching and Learning Methods

- lectures, and lecture elements, will be used in the first and second part where required to provide you with a broad orientation to periods, debates and themes;
- tutor-led seminars will be used through the programme to facilitate in-depth discussion of key developments, themes and debates;
- student-led seminars will feature progressively in the programme, and particularly in your third part special subject, as students develop greater knowledge and authority and the mutual confidence that allows you to learn from one another;
- group activities will allow you to develop and share knowledge and understanding with your peers outside a seminar room setting;
- study visits take place on many modules throughout the programme, in order to deepen your understanding of the past and its representation through engagements with landscapes, buildings, exhibits and other material forms of evidence;
- Advice and feedback hours and individual tutorials offer you the opportunity to develop your historical knowledge and understanding through one-to-one discussions with module tutors;
- 'Reading Histories' assists you in developing your own research project and building your confidence in the key conceptual frameworks that will shape your final year History dissertation or if you choose to write a dissertation in Politics then you will be trained in methodology and interpretation through the compulsory year 2 module PAIR2004.
- independent study is embedded in all stages of the programme, culminating in the third-part dissertation, encouraging you to develop your own specialized expertise in particular events, debates and themes.

Assessment Methods

- short commentaries of up to 1,000 words are used in first-part modules to assess and provide early feedback on critical analysis skills, your comprehension of primary sources and/or key conceptual terms;
- individual essays are used throughout the programme to assess your knowledge and understanding of key events, approaches, themes and debates;

- a documentary commentary ('gobbet') section of the exam for the second-part 15 credit options assesses your ability to evaluate primary sources and helps prepare you for the longer gobbet assignment in part 3;

- a documentary commentary ('gobbet') timed assignment in the third-part 'special subject' assesses your comprehension of historical context, particularly the circumstances in which such documents were produced and read or consumed;

- The preparation of a dissertation proposal in either part 2 (for a Politics dissertation) or part 3 (for a History Dissertation where it is a formative piece) will assess your ability to construct a feasible project, identify suitable resources and construct a realistic schedule for completion;

- the third-part dissertation assesses your attainment of an authoritative grasp of a research topic either in Politics or History, including an understanding and review of the relevant historiographical and/or theoretical literature. In a History dissertation you will demonstrate your understanding of historical context, key developments and chronology or in a Politics dissertation you will implement a well-formulated research design and conduct independent data collection;

- unseen examinations are used throughout the programme to test your understanding of key historical and political questions and debates and your grasp of the evidence required to resolve them.

Assessment tasks increase in complexity in line with progression, and are directly related to the learning outcomes of units. They usually integrate thinking skills with knowledge outcomes. For example, a class presentation and discussion on a specialist topic tests the ability to think through and organise material in preparation, and to think on your feet in discussion, as well as testing topic knowledge, interactive skills, strategic competence, and in some cases linguistic accuracy and fluency.

Subject Specific Intellectual and Research Skills

On successful completion of this programme you will be able to:

- B1. articulate and reflect on complementary subject-specific bodies of knowledge;
- B2. interrogate and contextualise historical evidence;
- B3. grasp and apply subject-specific terminology and method;
- B4. identify, investigate, analyse and advocate solutions to problems;
- B5. grasp and evaluate conflicting positions and formulate your own independent views on key questions;
- B6. structure a reasoned argument, synthesize relevant information, exercise critical judgement, and provide empirical evidence to support your case;
- B7. reflect upon your own learning and seek to make constructive use of feedback;
- B8. develop a major research project, drawing upon appropriate primary source materials and the relevant historiographical and/or theoretical literature.

Teaching and Learning Methods

- lectures will provide you with instructive examples of how to engage with a body of knowledge, structure an argument, interrogate and contextualise evidence, deploy key terms, and evaluate controversies;

- individual study – for class preparation, assessed work and exam revision – will foster an understanding of how historians and political scientists think and write: how they engage with a controversy, identify a source base, deploy theory where relevant and structure an argument in sympathy with the evidence;

- tutor-led seminars will provide you with an environment in which to discuss and debate your ideas and those of others;

- office hours and individual tutorials offer an occasion to discuss questions of method, resource, structure and argument one-to-one with your tutors.

Assessment Methods

- short commentaries are used in first part modules, and again in the second-part 15 credit option module exam and the third-part 'gobbets' exercise, to assess your ability to interrogate and contextualize historical evidence
- essays are used throughout the curriculum to assess your ability to identify relevant source materials, engage with a body of knowledge, negotiate controversy, deploy terminology and structure an argument from evidence;
- the third-part dissertation tests your ability to develop and deliver a major project of individual research, informed by historiographical and, where relevant, theoretical debates, rooted in sound methodology and argued from the primary evidence;
- unseen examinations are used throughout the curriculum to assess your ability to articulate and reflect upon a body of knowledge, critically discuss debates and structure an argument in sympathy with the evidence.

Transferable and Generic Skills

On successful completion of this programme you will be able to:

- C1. communicate ideas and arguments in a variety of written formats;
- C2. communicate ideas and arguments orally and in the context of formal presentations;
- C3. identify, select and draw upon a wide variety of useful and relevant materials in the development of a research project;
- C4. manage individual and group research projects to timely completion;
- C5. demonstrate interpersonal skills whilst working with others in the investigation of problems, and in the presentation of arguments and evidence;
- C6. demonstrate self-confidence and self-awareness both in collaborative activities and independent study;
- C7. identify and constructively reflect upon your own intellectual strengths and weaknesses.

Teaching and Learning Methods

- at all stages of the curriculum, your skills in written communication will be enhanced through formal and informal feedback on written assessments, with specific lectures on essay writing built into the first-part 'World Histories' module;
- your skills in oral communication will be developed through seminar discussions and non-assessed individual and group presentations throughout the curriculum, and in assessed group presentations;
- in tutorial meetings and office-hours, and through feedback, tutors will provide guidance about methods of research and project management;
- seminar discussions throughout the curriculum will provide an opportunity for you to enhance your interpersonal skills;
- through reflective exercises in the group project and more generally through one-to-one meetings with tutors and personal academic tutors, you will be encouraged to reflect upon your intellectual strengths and weaknesses.

Assessment Methods

- all forms of written assessment – commentaries, essays, exams and dissertations – will test your skills in written communication;
- your skills in oral communication will be assessed in group presentations;
- your ability to design and investigate a discrete research project, and manage it to completion, will be tested in 2,000 word first- and second-part essays, in 3,000 and 4,000 word third-part essays, and the preparation of a dissertation proposal linked to the third-part dissertation as well as the dissertation as the culmination of the degree.

Programme Structure

Information about pre and co-requisites is included in individual module profiles.

Where optional modules have been specified, the following is an indicative list of available optional modules, which are subject to change each academic year. Please note in some instances modules have limited spaces available.

Part I

Modern History and Politics at Southampton affords you the opportunity to study a large range of modules, covering a full geographical spread, from Britain and the rest of Europe to Asia, Australasia, Africa and the Americas. From the first semester of the first part onwards, you will research and learn in modules led by academics who are world-recognised in their fields. Studying modules within Politics and International Relations will introduce you to a host of theoretical and empirical ways of looking at the modern world. From issues of democracy and governance to the impact of globalization, the department is fully engaged in dealing with some of the most pressing issues of the modern age. Students also have a remarkable amount of flexibility to study modules outside of Modern History and Politics, including specially-developed Curriculum Innovation modules, interdisciplinary modules that expose you to a range of ways of approaching a topic.

Opportunity to Study a Minor Subject

The structure of your degree programme allows you to exercise choice in each part of study. You can exercise this choice in a number of ways.

- You can use these modules to deepen your knowledge of your main subject
- You can combine additional modules from your main subject with modules from other disciplines or choose from a selection of interdisciplinary modules.
- You can choose modules that build into a minor pathway, the title of which will be mentioned in your degree transcript. Details of the minors available and the modules that are included can be found at www.southampton.ac.uk/cip.

Programme details

The programme is normally studied over three parts full-time, but may also be taken on a part-time basis for a period of not less than four and not more than eight academic parts. Study is undertaken at three parts (each corresponding to one part of full-time study). There are 30 study weeks in each part.

The programme is divided into modules. Full-time students take modules worth 120 credits at each part, normally 60 credits in each semester; part-time students take modules worth 60 credits at each part, normally 30 credits in each semester. Single modules have a credit value of 15 (7.5 ECTS), while double modules have a value of 30 (15 ECTS). Each part has a total credit value of 120 (60 ECTS). All Modern History modules are double modules with the exception of the single HE Level 4 Cases and Contexts.

The curriculum aims to ensure progression from tutor-led to independent learning. At HE Level 4 basic knowledge and understanding are developed through HIST1151 (World Histories), and the four compulsory modules in Politics and International Relations (PAIR1001 Introduction to International Relations; PAIR1002 Political Systems; PAIR1005 Introduction to Political Inquiry; and PAIR1004 Political Ideas). Students also have a choice of two History 'Cases and Contexts' modules extending your engagement with modern history over the past three hundred years.

HE Level 5 modules provide opportunities to acquire wider knowledge and deeper understanding of specific regions, periods, or themes in History, and to develop necessary research skills in Politics and International Relations as well as to extend your acquaintance with a number of key areas ranging from political theory to the politics of migration to the workings of international bodies such as the EU.

At HE Level 6 in-depth knowledge and understanding of one or more specific areas in both History and Politics/International relations are developed through the independent work undertaken for the History Special Subject or Alternative History and for the Dissertation, which can be undertaken in either subject.

Curriculum content across all three parts is intended to reflect the manner in which the two disciplines complement, cut across, and underpin each other i.e. the programme is based on the assumption that in practice intellectual boundaries between the humanities and social sciences are artificial, and that an inter-disciplinary approach ensures the clearest insights into study of the past and of the contemporary world.

The programme structure is outlined below. In addition to modules offered by History and Politics, subject to the approval of their personal academic tutor, students may take up to 30 credits (15 ECTS) of modules offered in other disciplines in each part.

Progression Requirements

The programme follows the University's regulations for Progression, Determination and Classification of Results : Undergraduate and Integrated Masters Programmes and Progression, Determination and Classification of Results: Postgraduate Master's Programmes as set out in the University Calendar: <http://www.calendar.soton.ac.uk/sectionIV/sectIV-index.html>

Support for student learning

There are facilities and services to support your learning some of which are accessible to students across the University and some of which will be geared more particularly to students in your particular Faculty or discipline area.

The University provides:

- library resources, including e-books, on-line journals and databases, which are comprehensive and up-to-date; together with assistance from Library staff to enable you to make the best use of these resources
- high speed access to online electronic learning resources on the Internet from dedicated PC Workstations onsite and from your own devices; laptops, smartphones and tablet PCs via the Eduroam wireless network. There is a wide range of application software available from the Student Public Workstations.
- computer accounts which will connect you to a number of learning technologies for example, the Blackboard virtual learning environment (which facilitates online learning and access to specific learning resources)
- standard ICT tools such as Email, secure filestore and calendars.
- access to key information through the MySouthampton Student Mobile Portal which delivers timetables, Module information, Locations, Tutor details, Library account, bus timetables etc. while you are on the move.
- IT support through a comprehensive website, telephone and online ticketed support and a dedicated helpdesk in the Hartley Library.
- Enabling Services offering support services and resources via a triage model to access crisis management, mental health support and counselling. Support includes daily Drop In at Highfield campus at 13.00 – 15.00 (Monday, Wednesday and Friday out of term-time) or via on-line chat on weekdays from 14.00 – 16.00. Arrangements can also be made for meetings via Skype.
- assessment and support (including specialist IT support) facilities if you have a disability, long term health problem or Specific Learning Difficulty (e.g. dyslexia).
- the Student Services Centre (SSC) to assist you with a range of general enquiries including financial matters, accommodation, exams, graduation, student visas, ID cards
- Career and Employability services, advising on job search, applications, interviews, paid work, volunteering and internship opportunities and getting the most out of your extra-curricular activities alongside your degree programme when writing your CV
- Other support that includes health services (GPs), chaplaincy (for all faiths) and 'out of hours' support for students in Halls and in the local community, (18.00-08.00)
- A Centre for Language Study, providing assistance in the development of English language and study skills for non-native speakers.

The Students' Union provides

- an academic student representation system, consisting of Course Representatives, Academic Presidents, Faculty Officers and the Vice-President Education; SUSU provides training and support for all these representatives, whose role is to represent students' views to the University.
- opportunities for extracurricular activities and volunteering
- an Advice Centre offering free and confidential advice including support if you need to make an academic appeal
- Support for student peer-to-peer groups, such as Nightline.

Associated with your programme you will be able to access:

- personal academic tutors, made up from amongst the staff in Modern History and Politics, who are able to offer advice on work, careers and other important matters, or connect you with trained professionals who can do likewise;
- open office hours, whereby all staff make themselves available for those seeking advice about their course, essays, and so on;
- talks and training on topics such as essay writing, preparing for your dissertation, and so on.

Methods for evaluating the quality of teaching and learning

You will have the opportunity to have your say on the quality of the programme in the following ways:

- Completing student evaluation questionnaires for each module of the programme;
- Acting as a student representative on various committees, e.g. Staff: Student Liaison Committees, Faculty Programmes Committee OR providing comments to your student representative to feed back on your behalf;
- Serving as a student representative on Faculty Scrutiny Groups for programme validation;
- Taking part in programme validation meetings by joining a panel of students to meet with the Faculty Scrutiny Group.

The ways in which the quality of your programme is checked, both inside and outside the University, are:

- Regular module and programme reports which are monitored by the Faculty;
- Programme validation, normally every five years;
- External examiners, who produce an annual report;
- A national Research Exercise Framework (our research activity contributes directly to the quality of your learning experience);
- Higher Education Review by the Quality Assurance Agency.

Further details on the University's quality assurance processes are given in the Quality Handbook.

Career Opportunities

Studying Modern History and Politics at Southampton will help you to acquire the critical thinking and communication skills that are vital as you embark on your career, opening up an extremely wide variety of career options. Such invaluable transferable skills include the ability to weigh up evidence and arguments, to express your opinions coherently and concisely, to work independently, and to manage your time and workload effectively. These skills will demonstrate to employers that you are uniquely equipped to respond positively to the challenges and opportunities of tomorrow's workplace. Our graduates have succeeded in careers as diverse as law; the media; IT; the Civil Service; advertising, film and television; business and finance; teaching; politics; numerous roles in the public sector and NGOs; publishing; teaching; museums, galleries and libraries – to name but a few.

External Examiner(s) for the programme

Name: Dr Uta Andrea Balbier - King's College London

Name: Professor Rosie Campbell - Birkbeck College University of London

Name: Dr Phil Parvin - Loughborough University

Name: Dr Sarah Richardson - University of Warwick

Name: Dr Paul Cavill - University of Cambridge

Students must not contact External Examiner(s) directly, and external examiners have been advised to refer any such communications back to the University. Students should raise any general queries about the assessment and examination process for the programme with their Course Representative, for consideration through Staff: Student Liaison Committee in the first instance, and Student representatives on Staff: Student Liaison Committees will have the opportunity to consider external examiners' reports as part of the University's quality assurance process.

External examiners do not have a direct role in determining results for individual students, and students wishing to discuss their own performance in assessment should contact their Personal Academic Tutor in the first instance.

Please note: This specification provides a concise summary of the main features of the programme and the learning outcomes that a typical student might reasonably be expected to achieve and demonstrate if s/he takes full advantage of the learning opportunities that are provided. More detailed information can be found in the programme handbook.

Appendix 1:

Students are responsible for meeting the cost of essential textbooks, and of producing such essays, assignments, laboratory reports and dissertations as are required to fulfil the academic requirements for each programme of study. In addition to this, students registered for this programme also have to pay for:

Additional Costs

Type	Details
Software Licenses	All software is provided
Hardware	It is advisable that students provide their own laptop or personal computer, although shared facilities are available across the University campus.
Computer discs or USB drives	Students are expected to provide their own portable data storage device.
Stationery	You will be expected to provide your own day-to-day stationary items, e.g. pens, pencils, notebooks, etc.). Any specialist stationery items will be specified under the Additional Costs tab of the relevant module profile.
Textbooks	Where a module specifies core texts these should generally be available on the reserve list in the library. However due to demand, students may prefer to buy their own copies. These can be purchased from any source. Some modules suggest reading texts as optional background reading. The library may hold copies of such texts, or alternatively you may wish to purchase your own copies. Although not essential reading, you may benefit from the additional reading materials for the module.
Laboratory Equipment and Materials	All laboratory equipment and materials are provided.
Placements (including Study Abroad Programmes)	Students on placement programmes can expect to cover costs for health and travel insurance, accommodation and living expenses; travel costs; visa costs. This will vary depending on which country you are travelling to. Specific details on what additional costs there will be are detailed in the individual module profiles which can be found under the modules tab of the programmes details of your programme.
Printing and Photocopying Costs	Where possible, coursework such as essays; projects; dissertations is likely to be submitted on line. However, there are some items where it is not possible to submit on line and students will be asked to provide a printed copy. A list of the University printing costs can be found here: http://www.southampton.ac.uk/isolutions/students/printing/

In some cases you'll be able to choose modules (which may have different costs associated with that module) which will change the overall cost of a programme to you. Details of such costs will be listed in the Module Profile. Please also ensure you read the section on additional costs in the University's Fees, Charges and Expenses Regulations in the University Calendar available at www.calendar.soton.ac.uk.
